Deontay Wilder vs. Tyrrell Herndon will be in the Charles Koch Arena in Kansas on June 27. The main card starts at 8 p.m. ET. Wilder and Herndon should make their way to the ring around 11:30 p.m. ET, depending on how long the undercard fights last.

A former WBC heavyweight champion, Wilder (43-4-1) was a feared fighter with vicious knockout power, with 42 wins via the power punch. After going 0-2-1 against Tyson Fury for heavyweight gold, "The Bronze Bomber" has since gone 1-4 in his last five fights.

From headlining Las Vegas to competing in Wichita for the first time, Wilder doesn't care about location or opponent. He's ready to prove he still has what it takes to be a major player at heavyweight.

"I'm going to be dropping bombs," Wilder told The Wichita Eagle. "When I'm right mentally, physically, and emotionally, it's a sight to see. I have a lot of devastating knockouts on my resume. I'm a one-punch knockout artist, the hardest hitter in boxing history, period.

"I'm looking forward to feeling the love in Wichita and showing them who I know I am and who I've always been: one of the best fighters in the world."

Herndon (24-5) is on a three-fight win streak. The 37-year-old from San Antonio has won 15 fights via knockout. He goes from facing rising stars in Efe Ajagba and Richard Torrez Jr. to a veteran in Wilder.

It's currently unclear what the final cost of the fight will be via BLK Prime and whether they are charging an additional PPV fee to watch the fight.

Once one of the most feared punchers on the planet, Deontay Wilder heads into Friday's fight with Tyrrell Herndon desperately needing to find an offensive spark.

Wilder (43-4-1, 42 KO) has lost four of his five most recent trips to the ring, but the past two fights were especially troubling. Wilder was listless in losing a wide 12-round decision to Joseph Parker, landing just 39 of 204 punches thrown. Things got even worse against Zhilei Zhang, when Wilder landed just 16 of 95 punches thrown before suffering a brutal fifth-round knockout.

Wilder went undefeated in the first 43 bouts of his pro career, including 41 knockout wins, with the lone blemish a controversial December 2018 draw against Tyson Fury in a fight most felt Fury deserved to win. Fury would prove to be the better man when he won their February 2020 rematch by TKO in Round 7 and their trilogy fight in October 2021 by KO in Round 11.

Those were the first defeats of Wilder's career and also ended his lengthy run (10 defenses) as WBC heavyweight champion.

On paper, Herndon (24-5, 15 KO) is a perfect "get right" opponent for Wilder. Herndon's record looks decent, but his wins have come against less than impressive opposition. In his two most recent bouts, Herndon had to settle for split decision wins over fighters who entered with 8-9 and 7-0-1 records.

Herndon has also been stopped four times, with all four of those stoppages coming before the end of the third round.

This fight is the first of a three-fight deal between Wilder and Nelson Lopez Jr., a matchmaker who previously worked with Golden Boy Promotions and Premier Boxing Champions. The goal is for Wilder to get three wins over the course of that deal in hopes of setting up a showdown with Anthony Joshua, a dream fight that never materialized while the fighters were at the height of their powers.
