32 sec ago - Deontay Wilder will return to the ring for the first time in over a year as he looks to get back to winning ways against Tyrrell Herndon in Kansas. The former WBC world heavyweight champion has suffered back-to-back defeats in his last two bouts, slept by Zhilei Zhang and dominated by Joseph Parker for a decision loss.

Update: 28 June, 2025

Amid a downward spiral sparked by famous losses to Tyson Fury, "The Bronze Bomber" now seeks to rebuild his reputation in a late-career flurry at the age of 39.

Journeyman Herndon (24-5, 15 knockouts) may not be a simple task for Wilder (43-4-1, 42 KOs), though, as he is on a three-fight win streak and will be eager to secure the biggest result of his career.

Here's everything you need to know:

Wilder will fight Herndon on Friday 27 June at the Charles Koch Arena in Wichita, Kansas. The event is due to begin at 2am BST on Saturday (6pm PT / 8pm CT / 9pm ET on Friday), with Wilder vs Herndon ring walks set for 4am BST on Saturday (8pm PT / 10pm CT / 11pm ET on Friday).

How can I watch it?

Wilder is a dangerous fighter. The Bronze Bomber enters the ring with an impressive 43-4-1 record, including 42 KOs. Wilder is a heavy favorite, but the famed boxer has lost four of his last five bouts and only has one win since 2019 (an October 2022 knockout against Robert Helenius).

Herndon enters the ring with a 24-5-0 record (14 KOs), and the heavyweight challenger sounded confident that he'd score an upset victory when discussing the fight at a recent press event.

"When I step into that ring, I'm not just there to show up — I'm there to WIN. Don't blink or you'll miss it."

Also on the card, Deon "The Equalizer" Nicholson (21-1-0, 17 KOs) battles Devonte Williams (13-1-0, 6 KOs), and Nico Hernandez (11-0-0, 4 KOs) takes on Robert Ledesma (3-14-1).
